Match With Murtaugh Brings Two Standards That Beat Former Marks.

Newspaper Men Lose Ground in Commercial Duckpin Circuit Competition.

By KIRK C. MILLER.

Again the Georgetown Commercial League Springs into the limelight, this time by virtue of the fact that the Columbia Granite and Dredging Company team has shattered two of its own records, high team set and high team game. Spilling a total of 1,622 pins in its three games against Murtaugh Shops, the Dredgers bettered the team standard for high set by nearly twenty-five pins and a game of 578 in the opening skirmish gives the same club its other new

That 1,622 set was accomplished by means of three of the highest consecutive games which the Dredgers have ever rolled, this year or last, the figures having been 578, 544, and 505. one of the best batsmen in the country.

"Cap" Anson, of the Chicago Nationals, brought George Van Haltren all the way from California, believing he had in him the greatest left-hander the game ever had. George lasted about three seasons in the pitcher's position, batting much better than he pitched during the time.

He came to the front as a finished batsman while a member of the New York Giants; in fact, he was their star hitter for many years. Van lasted nearly a score of years in the game after he lost his pitching ability.

One of the game's most famous batsmen pushed into the game by the pitching route was Jess Burkett, the man who led the National League for three seasons. He received his first job with the New York Giants through his ability to pitch, having stacked up wonderful pitching for Worcester, then in the old Atlantic League in 1889.

Burkett was a strictly left-handed per-Atlantic League in 1889.

Burkett was a strictly left-handed person, so much so that he had heaped upon him the appellation of the "Human Crab." However, Burkett failed as a pitcher, but he could swat the ball in a manner most delightful. In three seasons of his career Burkett batted .400 and over
